Social Media: A Predator Playground A Free Parent & Teacher Workshop

Are you planning on buying your son or daughter a new iPhone, iPod, iPad, smartphone, tablet, or do they already have one? Are you aware that your son and daughter are entering what we call a Target Rich Environment? Are you looking at their activity online? Are you setting rules and boundaries? Come join Detective Sergeant Wells as he explains about the latest social media websites, where your children are playing and how to prevent your child from getting hurt. Can you name all the social media websites below? Do you know how to navigate them? Your child does.

Biography

Detective Sergeant Shane Wells has been a police officer for the Town of Northwood for 11 years, a member of the New Hampshire National Guard for the last twenty, and is on the Northwood School Board. He has been the D.A.R.E. Officer for the Northwood Elementary School for last seven and the Community Service Officer for the town the last two years. He has presented internet safety classes to grades 3-8 and to the Northwood Community. He has attended many conferences and trainings on internet crimes against children and child pornography which has led him to successfully investigate and prosecute such case. He has two children ages 15 and 11 and very familiar with the challenges parents face when it comes to technology, cyber-space and finding the time to sit down and talk to their child.
